– Are you a lifestyle homeschooler or is homeschooling what you do?

Answer the following questions – Yes or No

1. Do you consider homeschooling a job? It is part of what you do each day.
2. Do you consider homeschooling a lifestyle, it is part of the fabric of what your family has become, you are “homeschoolers.”
3. Do you homeschool out of need? For example: special needs, gifted, or for a specific academic reason?
4. Do you homeschool because of a greater purpose? You homeschool because you want your children to exemplify virtues, you wish to raise godly children or for family unity. You would consider any one or all of these things the main reason you homeschool.
5. If your right to homeschool was threatened would you be very upset but give in, realizing there is nothing you can do?
6. If your right to homeschool is threatened would you resist with every fiber of your being and hunker down for a big fight?
7. Do you grow weary and become mentally challenged and drained from a daily fight to balance school and household chores?
8. Are you working at balance but realize some days nothing works. You keep that greater goal in front of you because you recognize giving up is not an option.
9. Do you track every academic and extra curricula subject? For example grades for academics, sports, field trips (or write papers), anything that is related to school is neatly recorded somewhere to be sure your children are not missing out a well-rounded education.
10. Is your life an extension of homeschooling? Do you track most of your child's academics and extra curricula subjects as required by your state law, but you acknowledge that much of your child's “real” learning comes outside of the classroom.
